

NT Live: The Audience

Regal string music play over a clip of male and female actor standing on stage

A male narrator then says: 'Every Tuesday, at approximately 6:30pm, the Queen of the United Kingdom has a private audience with her Prime Minister.'

Two male actors dressed as servants place two chairs on stage

A male actor then appears on stage dressed in formal attire.

Female actor appears on stage walking across the stage with head bowed

Static image of female actor appears on stage on a black background and white text also on screen with the words "Oliver and Tony Award winner Helen Mirren as Queen Elizabeth II"

Male and female actors bow in front of female actor dressed as The Queen and say, 'Your Majesty'.

Text appears on screen on a bright yellow background in the form of a review 'Wholly Tremendous' *****
Telegraph

Male actor dressed as the Prime Minister of the UK then says, 'When I walk into a room heads fail to turn.'

Female actor dressed as The Queen responds warmly: 'Oh, how lovely.'

Two corgis then run across the stage

Female actor dressed as The Queen says, "Your position is that of the government, that of the United Kingdom, and that's an end of it."

Male actor dressed as the Prime Minister of the UK "You have a way of saying nothing and yet making your view perfectly clear."

Female actor dressed as The Queen then expresses frustration: 'I'd care for it more if I felt the British people had voted for it.'

Black text appears on screen "The play that inspired The Crown"

Female actor dressed as The Queen shouts 'Come on! Picnic! Picnic...'

Two corgis then run across the stage again

Male actor dressed as servant appears on stage with female actor dressed as The Queen and says to her "Never show that struggle ma'am. It is not what your subjects want from you."

Black text appears on screen "Returns to Cinema Screens"

Male actor dressed as the Prime Minister of the UK 'That belief might not be universally shared. I'm just trying to look after both of us.'

Female actor dressed as The Queen then says meeting, 'Just make up your mind what you all want from us, we must leave it there.'

Male actor dressed as servant appears on stage, and says 'One by one your Prime Ministers will fall beneath your spell... In here, in this audience, in this room.'

Female actor dressed as The Queen then shouts "Just make up your minds"

Various five-star reviews appear on screen in white text with a background of The Queen dressed in formal attire

A male narrator then says, "one by one One by one, your prime ministers will fall beneath your spell in here, in this audience, in this room."

Various clips of Female actor dressed as The Queen

White text appears on screen on a black background "The Audience" by Peter Morgan, Directed by Stephen Daldry

--Ends--